[Save the date] Social Service Workforce Week: 25-29 October 2021

This year's Social Service Workforce Week will be held from 25-29 October. Every year, we host the week as a way to bring attention to and build support for the social service workforce as well as raise awareness about promising workforce strengthening efforts around the world.

This year's theme is focused on the role of the social service workforce in disaster response and prevention – including climate-related disasters, disease outbreaks and protracted conflicts. Throughout the week we will post new blogs, worker profiles and resources around this theme as well as will encourage a dynamic exchange of information and resources through our social media channels.

Stay tuned for more information.

[Newly released] State of the Social Service Workforce Report 2020: Responding, Adapting and Innovating During COVID-19, and Beyond

We recently released our State of the Social Service Workforce Report 2020. This year's report provides a unique global perspective on the challenges social service organizations and workers have faced since COVID-19 began and showcases how they have been able to adapt and innovate in response to such challenges. It also explores the lasting impact of the pandemic on organizations and workers and the way they work, including their future needs, their changing roles and the opportunities they now have to further innovate and raise awareness of their work. It concludes with recommendations to help ensure the workforce is better able to respond and adjust, not only to this, but to future pandemics and global crises.

Participants from across the globe took part in our Global Conversation event

On 15th September 2021, the Global Social Service Workforce Alliance and Children and Families Across Borders co-hosted The social service workforce in and beyond the pandemic: A global conversation on adaptation, innovation and the fight for social justice. Over 260 participants from across the globe joined the virtual event to discuss the biggest issues facing the social service workforce. Participants stemmed from a broad range of roles and experiences—including social service practitioners, academics, students, policy makers and advocates—and had the unique opportunity to come together to discuss experiences and insights related to the impact of the pandemic on social service practice, education and training as well as on the role of the social service workforce in social justice.

Scaling up Child Protection: A framework for the future

An accompanying document to UNICEF's 2030 Child Protection Strategy, this discussion paper offers technical support for countries to scale up child protection programs. The paper is in two volumes. Volume 1 provides extensive background, context and information to inform a conceptual framework for scaling up child protection. Volume 2 outlines that conceptual framework for how to scale up child protection policies, programmes and services. Both volumes are intended to support UNICEF country offices to consider and plan for scaling up child protection programmes, policies and services.

Caseworker's Handbook: Case management for reintegration of children into family- or community-based care

This Handbook is a summarized, simplified version of the Case Worker's Guidebook for Case Management for Reintegration of Children/Young Adults into Family- or Community-Based Care. It provides an overview of the principles and practices of case management for reunification and placement of children/young adults outside of parental care (e.g., street-connected children/young adults or from Charitable Children's Institutions and Statutory Children's Institutions) into family- and community-based care, up until sustainable reintegration is achieved. The Handbook aims to provide an easy and quick reference to critical information and "how to" about case management for reintegration.

The State of the World's Children 2021: Promoting protecting and caring for children's mental health

The COVID-19 pandemic has raised concerns about the mental health of a generation of children. But the pandemic may represent the tip of a mental health iceberg – an iceberg we have ignored for far too long. The State of the World's Children 2021 examines child, adolescent and caregiver mental health. It focuses on risks and protective factors at critical moments in the life course and delves into the social determinants that shape mental health and well-being.

It calls for commitment, communication and action as part of a comprehensive approach to promote good mental health for every child, protect vulnerable children and care for children facing the greatest challenges.

A Psychosocial Support Toolkit for Social Workers: Supporting forcibly displaced children, youth and their families

This toolkit is based on a review of the most recent research evidence around the psychosocial needs of forcibly displaced children and youth and discussions with social workers. It encourages a group approach to psychosocial support because the reality is that there are few psychosocial professionals available for displaced communities which makes individual counselling difficult. The toolkit is written to be read directly by social workers either alone or in groups. It can also form part of a training and we have given suggestions for trainers throughout the text. It provides a background to work with displaced families, outlines how to set up a psychosocial support group and then suggests exemplar and tested resources that can be used within the groups.

Promoting Resilience-Informed Care: A practical guidance resource for frontline workers in family based care

The practical guidance document provides a framework for how to support children to be resilient in the face of adversity. It describes when children may experience Adverse Childhood Experiences, what can happen to children when they do, and how it is possible for children to regain strength and recover. It is for anyone working with children at risk of entering, already living in, preparing or having already left care.

E-learning Series: A children's guide for child support workers to better your professional practice

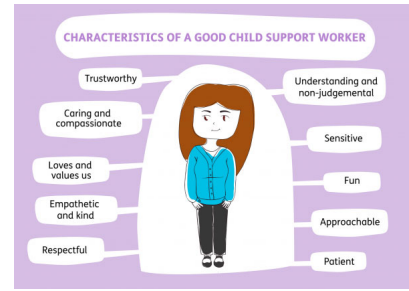

Young people want a relationship with their workers. This course, presented by Terres Des Hommes, is created by youth and is devoted to young people's voices to share their own ideas and present concepts. These e-learning modules aim to help support workers understand the key behaviors, attitudes, skills and actions that they need to consider when working with children and young people.
